Bridging The Gap Between Living Memory And Historical Records

I was just speaking with a woman whose parent was a Holocaust survivor. In the course of our discussion, she mentioned that her beloved mother had passed recently, and as she spoke of this tragedy, a light of realization beamed in her eyes. She quietly told me, "I guess I'm now going to be the one going around and speaking about the Holocaust."

We live in an age very different than most in Jewish history, because one of the most tragic and several of the most important events in our history occurred within living memory: the Holocaust, the victory of WWII, and the founding of the State of Israel. Think about the rarity. So few events over the last 3,000 years have echoed through the ages as have these in our very distant past: the escape from Egypt, the formation of the Davidic Monarchy, the destruction of the two Temples, the Bar Kochba Rebellion, the invitation for Jews to move to Spain, the expulsion from Spain. For most Jews throughout history, the most dynamic and traumatic events endured as nothing more than stories passed down through the generations. However, we exist in a world in which people still vividly remember fighting for their lives in WWII, surviving the Holocaust, and championing the formation of Israel. We live in a world in which we've spoken directly with survivors of the Holocaust and with American and Israeli heroes. These voices remain a treasure trove of our living history.

Thus we, more than any other generation, bear an immense responsibility. We are the generation that will bridge the gap between living memory and historical records, between first-hand accounts and hearsay. Sometime in the roughly next 30 years, there will come a moment when first-hand accounts of the Holocaust, WWII, and the creation of the Jewish State will cease to exist. Our memory of these events will mimic the memory of Jews throughout history. We will only find these memories in historical records.

Though we have already proven up to the task, as we've been vigilant in writing and recording history, we must continue to remind ourselves of our past in order to ensure our future. To accomplish this, we've done something quite extraordinary ... we've added new holy days to our Jewish calendar. Adding something to our calendar doesn't sound extreme, but to a people with thousands of years of tradition, it's a rarity. So, in memory and in honor of the events of the 20th century, Yom HaShoah (Holocaust Memorial Day), Yom Hazikaron (Israeli Memorial Day) and Yom Ha'atzmaut (Israeli Independence Day) now appear during the period between Passover and Shavuot (usually in May).

Every year we must find ways to remind ourselves of a history that will very soon lose its last living survivors. This past month, Alexandra Senfft spoke on a Friday night about coming to grips with the pain of being a descendant of a Nazi soldier, and Ronit Holtz, a Senior at SCAD, will use our Mordecai Sheftall Memorial House as a gallery for her final project - which is based on the Holocaust. Everyone will be invited to visit, and she will be our guest speaker on May 4th. On May 23rd, Deborah Dash Moore, the author of GI Jews (about Jews who served in the American military during WWII) will be a guest speaker at the Might Eighth Museum, and the JEA will host our annual Yom HaShoah Commemoration, Yom Hazikaron (Israeli Memorial Day) and Yom Ha'atzmaut (Israeli Independence Day) on May 2nd and May 9th respectively. We are a link in the chain of our history that may be even more critical than past and future generations, and I believe we are up to the task.

Friday, May 17th at 7pm
following Shabbat service

Still Thriving After All These Years: Savannah's Mickve Israel at 285

By Herbert L. Victor

In July 1733, the William and Sarah landed in Savannah with 41 Jewish passengers. Among them was Dr. Samuel Nunes Ribiero, who saved the five-month-old Georgia colony from a rampant epidemic that had killed many colonists. Nunes, with his invaluable medical background, and the other 40 Jews were welcomed because they could help to build the colony, replacing settlers who had died. They were immediately given the same rights and privileges as other Georgia colonists, a first for Jews in America.

These early Jews came to Georgia to create a Jewish community, bringing with them a Torah and a circumcision kit. They soon established a mikveh, a cemetery, and a congregation, Mickve Israel.

Today, Savannah's Jewish community and Mickve Israel are thriving. As it celebrated its 285th anniversary in 2018, the congregation crossed the 400-family marker for the first time ever, and hosted over 10,000 guests who toured its sanctuary and museum. A major restoration of the 140-year-old sanctuary is just about complete. Along with these milestones, the year saw Mickve Israel hold a variety of unique programs for Savannah's Jewish community, the general community, and visitors.

Coinciding with the city's well-known St. Patrick's Day celebration, in March Mickve Israel presented an exhibit from Ireland, "Representations of Jews in Irish Literature", co-sponsored by Atlanta's Irish Consulate General and Georgia Southern University's Center for Irish Research and Teaching. Accompanying the exhibit (previously displayed in the U.S. only at Columbia and Georgetown Universities) were programs on Irish-Jewish autobiographies, Daniel O'Connell (hero to Ireland's Catholics and Jews), Savannah's Irish-Jewish connections (including Mickve Israel's rabbi for 42 years, George Solomon, whose mother was an Irish immigrant), and an "Irish-Jewish Celebration through Words and Music".

In May, Mickve Israel's History and Heritage Committee sponsored speaker Michael Jordan, a Savannah history videographer whose latest video focuses on the CSS Georgia, a Confederate gunboat recently dredged from the bottom of the Savannah River. The gunboat, built to defend Savannah during the Civil War, had been funded by the Ladies Gunboat Association, which included five Mickve Israel congregants.

Mickve Israel celebrated its 285th anniversary in July with Shabbat services featuring Rabbi David Saperstein, longtime director of the Union for Reform Judaism's Religious Action Center. Rabbi Saperstein discussed the history of social justice from biblical Judaism to today, including how it has connected with Mickve Israel history.

The busy year culminated in October with a signature Mickve Israel event, the popular Shalom Y'all Jewish Food Festival, which celebrated its 30th anniversary. Each year, several thousand Savannahians and tourists enjoy traditional Jewish foods including blintzes, kugel, chopped liver, challah, latkes, and more. Opened and closed with the sounding of the shofar, the festival also features Jewish music and dance. Its name, venue, and size have changed over the years, becoming one of Savannah's favorite festival events and possibly the largest Jewish food festival in America. (If you have not had this experience, y'all come next year on October 27 to get a taste of Jewish Savannah.)

The festival provides an opportunity for Mickve Israel members to work together as a community while offering outreach to Savannah's Jewish and general communities.

Sadly, this year's festival occurred the day after the Pittsburgh Tree of Life synagogue massacre. There was a touch of sadness in the air, but congregants were moved by the individual expressions of sympathy and solidarity from those in attendance.

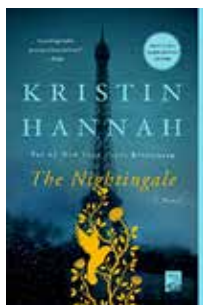

Since landing in Savannah 285 years ago, Jews have been involved in all aspects of Savannah life and history. The seeds that those earliest Jews planted, as well as those who came to Savannah since, have blossomed, allowing Mickve Israel and Savannah's Jewish community to grow and thrive.

Celebrate Jewish American Heritage Month by exploring the Gutstein Museum, our sanctuary, and our Slany Torah exhibit to learn more about our congregation's story as well as Savannah and American history.

CMI BOOK BANTER BOOK CLUB THE NIGHTINGALE BY KRISTIN HANNAH

Wednesday, May 29, 1:00PM

The Nightingale tells the stories of two sisters, separated by years and experience, by ideals, passion and circumstance, each embarking on her own dangerous path toward survival, love, and freedom in German-occupied, war-torn France—a heartbreakingly beautiful novel that celebrates the resilience of the human spirit and the durability of women. It is a novel for everyone, a novel for a lifetime.

Spring Is Truly The Season For Sisterhood

By the time you read this, Sisterhood will have officially begun Springtime in Savannah! It is such a wonderful way for us to usher in Passover.

Every year the women of Sisterhood (and their friends, family and guests) celebrate together. We eat the seder meal and read the Haggadah (especially created for us by Anita Homansky and Cheryl Ross and put together with lovely images by Jill Sandberg). It is truly a work of art! We have the Passover meal then enjoy music and the dancing. Everyone joins in the festivities!

Finally, Sisterhood will visit the Jewish cemetery on May 5. We will see the resting places of some of our founders and ancestors. Ellen Byck always docents with a personal touch to make it very special.

On May 11, we will join our congregation to celebrate Sisterhood Shabbat. Members of Sisterhood will conduct the entire service. Please join us for service and lunch after.

Our VP of Programing, Carol Cohen, will be running a program called "Step-up." It is under the auspices of United Way and it provides clothing to women who are entering or re-entering the work force.

On May 7, we will visit the Rembrandt exhibit at the Telfair. It includes a docent-led Tour and we will lunch together afterwards.

Our final event before summer will be our "Woman of Valor" dinner. On June 5 we will honor two of Sisterhood's most dedicated and accomplished members. They have inspired many of Mickve Israel's traditions and undertakings. Let's shower them with gratitude! Enjoy your summer-relax and plan to join us
