O

Trip to Israel

I was completing my final semester in college when I applied out of the blue to be a counselor on a trip to Israel through the Houston Federation. I had worked at camp every summer from the end of high school through college but really wanted to see the Holy Land. I then decided to go "all out" for the interview and even made the then very serious decision to give up my pride and joy, my full head of hair that reached down to the middle of my back. My mom couldn't have been more thrilled. Oh, those were the good ol' days.

After winning the job opportunity of a lifetime, I eventually boarded a plane with three other counselors and 85 soon to be high school seniors and made my first pilgrimage to Israel. I've returned many times since and even lived there on three separate occasions, but there's nothing like going there for the first time. Every experience became first of firsts. The first time seeing the Wall. The first time eating a true Israeli Falafel. The first time floating in the Dead

Leading a Birthright trip 12 years after my first trip to Israel

Sea. The first time asking an Israeli where's the restroom in Hebrew, "Aye-pho Shirutim?" There's nothing like coming to a modern country in the Middle East, where we find > beautiful, brand new high rises and Wi-Fied cities, along with camels, deserts, and thousands upon thousands of years of history.

> It's always been another dream to lead a congregational trip to Israel, and look forward to spending 10 days there with 25 people from the Savannah community. Many of the people going will be making their first pilgrimage, and I look forward to enjoying the sights and sounds of the Holy Land through their eyes.

We'll make sure to keep everyone updated on our trip through Facebook, and hopefully, it will be the start of many trips for our congregation. I hope everyone has a wonderful summer, and I'll make sure to eat a falafel for everyone.

FROM THE PARNAS

Security Update

About two years ago, we as a board had a professional security consultant do a thorough analysis of our congregation's physical plant security and current security procedures. He developed a program for us that we have been using. Security is an ongoing process, and we are always working on improvement based on keeping current and actively analyzing current protocols.

Our congregation has always been ahead of the curve on most of our security procedures. We've upgraded locks, installed cameras, and have armed police. Our board now has decided we need to upgrade our security during services in the following manner: soon after services start, we will be closing the Bull Street doors. This will provide a strong barrier against any attack. Our police security will then move to the Wayne Street door and congregants can access the synagogue from there.

Additionally, the door from the museum into the office area will be locked with a controlled access door to enhance the security of our office staff. We already have a similar door to access the door near the Rabbi's office.

I also want to remind everyone that you play a part in the security by being on the lookout for suspicious behavior and to notify our staff, ushers and board members as needed.

We have a policy that large bags and backpacks are subject to search. Sometimes it gets very busy when people are coming into the sanctuary, so if you see someone who has come into the building and needs something inspected, please flag me or an usher down to help check bags.

Working together to keep us all safe is a group effort.

Thanks for doing your part. Your President/Parnas,

Charles

Dr. Diego (Samuel) Nunes (Also spelled Nunez) Ribeiro: Georgia's First Public Hero (Part I)

Inquisition Palace in

Cathedral Square of Lisbon,

By Margie E. Levy

Dr. Diego (Samuel) Nunes Ribeiro of Lisbon, Portugal, was born into a Marrano (Crypto-Jew) family that was still passing along the precepts of Judaism two centuries beyond Spain's expulsion of all its practicing Jews in 1492. Dr. Nunes lived a double life. Publicly, Dr. Nunes served high

Jewish quarter at Medelim, birthplace of Dr. Nunes dignitaries of the Catholic Church as a distinguished doctor. At the same time, Dr. Nunes and his family were committing religious crimes that could have earned them death at the stake.

Dr. Nunes managed to live that double life until the spring of 1726, when Inquisition spies caught him. Dr. Nunes, his wife Rebecca, and their three children were caught in the middle of their Passover Seder. For most Marranos, the crime of seeking the Lord according to their prohibited faith would have led to torture and death. Fortunately, because Dr. Nunes was the private physician and close friend of the Grand Inquisitor who was suffering from an enlarged where Dr Nunez and his wife prostate gland, the Grand Inquisitor was reluctant would have been questioned 1732, the leaders of Bevis Marks approached the to lose the good doctor's services. Dr. Nunes was spared on the condition that two Inquisition officials would reside at his home day and night, while keeping a sharp eye on the doctor's activities.

Once severed from his spiritual roots, Dr. Nunes quickly decided that life in Portugal was unbearable. He then plotted his escape that many years later was recorded by Major Mordecai M. Noah, great grandson of a fellow Marrano who had escaped with the doctor, detailing how Dr. Nunes had fooled his jailors:

"The doctor had a large and elegant mansion on the banks of the Tagus, and being a man of large fortune, he was in the habit of entertaining the principal families of Lisbon. On a pleasant summer day, he invited a party to dinner, and among the guests was a captain of an English brigantine anchored at some distance in the river. While the company were amusing themselves on the lawn, the captain invited the family and part of the company to accompany him on board the brigantine and partake of a lunch prepared for the occasion. It had been previously arranged between the doctor and the captain to convey the family to England for a thousand moidores in gold. The women had sewn their diamonds, jewels and other valuables into the hoops of their skirts and dresses, and the men carried gold and other valuables (distributed by Dr. Nunes after changing his securities into gold) in their belts and picnic baskets."

The Nunes' residence and all its furnishings and even servants were subsequently seized by the Inquisition and confiscated to the state.

Upon arriving in London, they attended Bevis Marks synagogue, the oldest Jewish congregation in Great Britain, founded by an earlier Sephardic group in 1656. Once in London, the men and boys were circumcised, the couples > remarried in Jewish ceremonies, and they gave up their Christian names to receive Hebrew names. For example, Diego Nunes became Samuel, and his wife became Rebecca. The group struggled economically and spiritually, living as immigrants and learning what their Judaism was all about.

> After hearing that King George II had granted a charter for the Colony of Georgia to James Edward Oglethorpe and his Trustees in Trustees to include the Jews from Portugal on Oglethorpe's ship, but they were refused. The Bevis Marks leaders then decided to fund a passage themselves. Together with 2 families from Germany, the Sheftall and Minis families (8 people), 34 of the Portuguese Jews, including the Nunes family, set sail for the New World colony of Georgia aboard the "William and Sarah" in January, 1733. After a difficult crossing during which the ship was damaged and forced to go ashore on the North Carolina coast for repairs, 41 Jews arrived in Savannah on July 11, 1733. A child had died on the voyage. This was the largest influx of Jewish immigrants ever to arrive in colonial America.

(Part II will discuss the importance of Dr. Nunes to the Georgia colony, his last years, and some of his descendants who were influential in American history.)

Local couple honored for philanthropic work

by Leslie Moses for savannahnow.com

Two years ago, Carol Greenberg's phone rang with a request: Did she want to help feed Thanksgiving meals to families of hospice patients?

She did and she added that she'd donate the food.

Greenberg herself started that Hospice Thanksgiving program some 15 years ago. Her husband, Dr. Joel Greenberg, remembers frying turkey outside at 10:30 p.m. by flashlight. The couple's goodwill was recently put in the spotlight.

A volunteer group honored the Greenberg's philanthropy last fall with the Myrtle Wreath Award, the highest honor of Hadassah, an international women's organization of American Jewish volunteers, founded in 1912.

The honor recognizes individuals who have contributed significantly to Jewish life in Israel or the United States.

"They are truly an incredible couple," Jean Weitz, a Savannahian who nominated them for the award said.

"It was a very easy decision," Savannahian Janis Javetz added. "They are extremely well deserving."

A city that loves a volunteer

Even while taking chemotherapy, Carol Greenberg organized community projects.

"When she was barely able to walk without assistance," Dr. Greenberg recalled, "she didn't stop."

"She puts her mind to really good use," Javetz said. "There's nothing she wouldn't do for people."

Javetz recalls when Greenberg helped newly arrived Russian families. She'd taken two families grocery shopping and others to doctors' appointments.

"I was exhausted just listening to her," Javetz said. "She just goes and goes and goes."

Greenberg, formerly of Miami, taught in public school and college before moving to Savannah, "a city that loves a volunteer," as she put it.

She founded MorningStar Cultural Arts Group in 1989, supporting new artists and connecting volunteers with other local non-profits.

She specializes in creating something she then turns over to stakeholders, like the Hospice Thanksgiving program.

MorningStar has created and donated 900 unique, free programs to Savannah.

You can see one of her ideas, The Midtown Miracle Community Garden, which helps feed local children, growing at the corner of Abercorn and East 64th on formerly condemned land.

"Carol is by far one of the kindest, gentlest persons I know," Weitz said, mentioning Greenberg's concern for the outcasts and lonely—people and animals alike.

The 10-year survivor of Stage III ovarian cancer also advocates for genetic and gynecological diseases, and served nine years as a Cultural Arts commissioner.

"She has adopted more people than you can imagine," Javetz said, who tells how Greenberg recently planned to pay for a banquet dinner for about 20 friends.

More than just a doctor

Dr. Greenberg jokes that the Myrtle Wreath Award was for his wife.

"I think it was wonderful they were giving that award to Carol and that guy she married,"

He said was primarily "along for the ride."

"Oh, I don't think so," Carol said. "My husband's friends don't often see him as anything more than a doctor."

The full-time neurologist directs the NeuroDiagnostics Laboratory at Memorial University Medical Center and is chief of the neurology section in the department of medicine.

His other titles are: director of Memorial's neurology education for the internal medicine residences, co-medical director of Memorial's stroke program and president of Savannah Neurology Specialists.

"But he's so much more behind the scenes," Carol Greenberg said.

"He's extremely community-oriented," Weitz added.

He was president of Congregation Mickve Israel, the Savannah Jewish Federation and the Jewish Educational Alliance, for example.

"The humanitarian among humanitarians," Carol Greenberg said.

Yin and yang

The Greenbergs met in high school. Carol, president of a girl's club, asked Joel out to a party the group hosted. They'll celebrate 39 years of marriage in June.

"They are so supportive of each other," Weitz said.

"They are yin and yang," Javetz said.

Carol has boundless energy, "a thousand ideas" and can put on a festival on a shoestring budget, Dr. Greenberg said. "She sees those opportunities everywhere."

"We operate differently," he aded.

"Silver-tonged" Dr. Greenberg chooses his words wisely and works well within established systems.

If a meeting should take an hour, Dr. Greenberg sticks to the point and the meeting takes an hour, according to Javetz, recalling when he was president of the Savannah Jewish Federation.

He finds common-sense ways to streamline work, according to Carol Greenberg.

Repair the world

A list of the Greenberg's service and leadership runs long. How do they do it?

"There is an investment of time," Dr. Greenberg said while mentioning weeks when he volunteers three or four nights after work.

Still, family is foremost, Carol said. "Our children always knew he was there."

The Greenbergs hold a Jewish core value of Tikkun olam or repairing the world. They believe creation is not complete and they work to make the world better.

They also believe in Tzedakah or righteous giving, different than from-the-heart giving.

"It's not charity," Dr. Greenberg said.

Righteous giving is a command they follow, doing good. But they both enjoy participating in work that helps others.

"I think that's reward in and of itself," Dr. Greenberg said.

"I do better when I'm thinking about somebody else," Carol Greenberg said.

She said she believes "there's always somebody else who has it worse than you do."

A Woman of Valor

A woman of Valor-seek her out For she is to be valued above rubies. Her husband trusts her. and they cannot fail to prosper. All the days of her life She is good to him. She opens her hands to those in need And offers her help to the poor. Adorned with strength and dignity, She looks to the future with cheerful trust. Her speech is wise, And the law of kindness is on her lips. Her children rise up to call her blessed, Her husband likewise praises her: "Many women have done well, But you surpass them all". Charm is deceptive and beauty short-lived, but a woman loyal to God has truly earned praise. Give her honor for her work; Her life proclaims her praise From Proverbs 31
